CELCAA welcomes news of a political agreement between the EU and Indonesia

During what was an eventful weekend for EU trade relations with third countries, CELCAA celebrates the news that a political agreement, or 'agreement in principle', has been reached in the FTA negotiations between the EU and Indonesia. This paves the way for the definitive conclusion of negotiations for an accord, planned for the coming weeks.

With a population of over 285 million people, Indonesia is a net-importer of many different agricultural products and represents an enormous opportunity for EU businesses. As the global trade landscape becomes increasingly defensive and inward looking, CELCAA members are reassured to see the EU and a major partner country choosing the path of openness and shared future prosperity. A robust agreement will create the conditions for easier business relations and ultimately, a more resilient supply chain.
